

Can You Answer Yes?

Alluring ways to become separated from our earnings confront us on every side. Compared with these the channels of profitable saving are relatively small.

Yet in the business of getting on in life saving is admittedly of far greater importance than earning or spending.

Do you save? Do you save haphazardly? Or do you save and bank consistently?

When you answer yes to the last query, you can begin to expect big things of the future.

THE HAMRICK FAMILY

From Moccasin Tracks by W. C. Dod-drill. "Rattlesnake Bill."

Patrick Hamrick settled in the Maryland Colony in the days prior to the American Revolution. He was the father of twelve sons, who moved with him and settled in Prince William County, Virginia. Some of these sons moved as far south as Georgia; some went to Kentucky. Benjamin and Joel settled in Greenbrier county, now West Virginia. Benjamin married a McMillon and removed to Cherry Tree Bottom, where the town of Richwood is located. From there he went to the Williams river, where he was informed of an intended massacre. Hastily gathering together a few household articles and taking his family, he fled to Donnelly's fort, situated in Greenbrier county, ten miles northeast of Lewisburg. One of his children, a boy only a week old, was carried by one of the men in the back of his hunting shirt one entire day without subsistence.

It was not known whether the child was living or dead until it was taken out at the fort late in the evening. It soon revived, but its collarbone had been broken. After the Indian danger had passed, he moved to the mouth of Big Birch and began an improvement at a place called Big Elk. He was the father of four sons, William, Benjamin, David and Peter. The last named remained in Braxton county, and the other three settled in the Elk valley above Webster Springs.

William and Benjamin married Jane and Nancy, daughters of Colonel Isaac Gregory, and David married a Miller. William, the hunter, had four sons, Isaac, Adam, Benjamin and William G. The last named was one of the valiant sons of Webster county, who responded to Lincoln's call for volunteers. He was wounded at the battle of Winchester, while acting as color-bearer, but he was with Grant at Appomattox and was the proud possessor of a heart-shaped piece of the apple tree under which the surrender was negotiated.

The sons of Benjamin were Allen, Addison, William, James and Christopher. David's sons were James, Peter, John, David, Benjamin, George Levi and William. Interesting sketches could be written of each of these seventeen great grandsons of Patrick Hamrick. They lived active, industrious lives and left sons to perpetuate their names.

The three brothers above mentioned were the ancestors of the very numerous family of Hamricks now living in Webster county. It will be seen from the foregoing, that they are of a prolific stock and the meeting so many stalwart Hamricks between Webster Springs and Whitaker Falls need not create surprise. This is by far the most numerous family in the county, there being about four hundred representatives in Fork Lick district.

The descendants of Patrick Hamrick can be found in nearly every state west of the Alleghenies and in almost every county of West Virginia. The name is spelled in various ways in different localities. "Hamrick," "Hamric," and Hambrick," are the three forms most generally used.

James Dyer, senior, came from Pendleton county about 1810, and located above Fork Lick. His son, James married a Sawyers and settled on the Gauley, where he built a commodious house on a hill overlooking the river, at the mouth of Beaver Run. He brought the first wagon to what is now Webster county, in 1837, from Alleghany county, Virginia. He was the first Superintendent of Free Schools of Webster county, and made a most excellent official. John R. Dyer, now (1915) Clerk of the Circuit Court is a great-grandson of James Dyer, senior, the pioneer. His grandsons, Harvey, George, and Cyrus, are prominent citizens of Webster county.

John R. Cogar came from Braxton county in 1842. He was a son of Jacob Cogar, who was a member of the company of soldiers, that went to Norfolk in 1813 to fight the British. He was one of the last survivors of the Second War of Independence, having lived to the extreme age of one hundred and four years. John R. married Mary Gregory and settled on the divide between the Elk and the Gauley, in his twenty-first year. He cleared a large farm, which he kept in a fine state of cultivation. As an orchardist he was unsurpassed and his apples would have brought a fancy price in any market. He was one of the best bee hunters in the county, and after he had passed the allotted three score and ten, he still went into the woods in search of wild bees. He was also very successful in the pursuit of bears, deer and panthers. He killed a greater number of the last named animal than any other of the pioneer hunters. He was the father of a large number of boys, who still live in the county which their father helped to establish.

David Baughman settled on the Gauley one mile above Turkey creek in the latter part of the thirties. He was a farmer, a cooper, a millwright, a carpenter, and a blacksmith. He possessed real mechanical talents, and had he received a technical education, he would have become a master workman. He was very peculiar in many ways but his honesty and his veracity were never questioned. He too was an orchardist and his fine orchard still standing is a monument to his industry and perseverance. When he first moved to the Gauley brook trout were very plentiful and could be caught in large numbers. In the spring, they would congregate below his mill dam in large schools, waiting for a tide to enable them to pass up stream. Some large trout may yet be caught at the Baughman mill.

W. A. Browning caught the biggest bass of the season at the Apperson hole last Thursday. It was over 21 inches long and weighed five pounds. He got a number of others of two pounds or better. He was bait fishing. This was about the first day that the water was at good fishing stage, and it rained the next day.

"Many of those who borrowed and bought Liberty Bonds ignored the complementary injunction to save and pay for them. A fifty dollar bond in the hands of a patriot turned spendthrift was to him a fifty dollar bond to be spent Saturday night. If the fifty dollar bill turned out to be a forty-five dollar bill, small matter. This was the first and most immediate cause of the depreciation of Liberty Bonds."—Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury.
